FIFTEEN PERSONS WASHED AWAY

Tidal Wave Havoc In Bombay

BOMBAY, Nov. 29.

The tidal wave which swept the shores of Bombay, following yesterday's earthquake according to reports, proved to be more disastrous than the earthquake itself. On the shores of Bombay's suburbs, fifteen persons were washed away when the huge tidal wave, six and a half feet in height, the like of which has not been experienced in Bombay for years, hit the seashore between Juhu and Versova, a distance of three miles. Out of the fifteen persons washed away, two were saved. Three bodies were picked up later and the fate of the remaining ten is not known.. Four women and one man belonging to the fisherfolk were caught in the tidal wave at the Versova creek at the northern end of Juhu and they disappeared within a moment. The neighbouring fishermen put out their boats in an attempt to save them but after great difficulty they could save only one woman. Three bodies were traced later and the body of the man is still missing. Simultaneously, an entire Muslim family consisting of the husband, wife and three children and two servants was swept away while returning from Haji Ali "Darga" at Mahalakshmi near Worli. Only one servant managed to swim ashore to narrate the tragic story.

The upheaval lasted only a few minutes. Besides loss of lives, a number of boats were torn off their moorings.

The tidal wave in a minor form was also noticed in some parts of Bombay harbour but no serious damage is reported

Weather experts believe that the earthquake which was felt yesterday morning in many parts of India luckily spent its fury in the sea and this prevented a great disaster, the land experiencing only tremors.—A. P.
